Subject: School Admissions – Honesty, Fairness and Our Islamic Values

Assalamu Alaikum wa Rahmatullahi wa Barakatuh

Dear Parents and Carers,

I pray that you and your families are in the best of health and imaan.

On behalf of the Governing Board, I would like to begin by thanking the overwhelming majority of parents who approach our school's admissions process with honesty and integrity. We recognise how important securing a place at Al-Noor Primary School is to families, and we greatly appreciate the trust and commitment shown by our school community.

As an Islamic school, honesty (sidq), trustworthiness (amanah) and justice (adl) are fundamental to everything we stand for. These are not simply values we teach our children, but principles that should guide our own actions and decisions.

Allah (SWT) reminds us in the Holy Qur'an:

> "O you who believe! Fear Allah and be with those who are true."
> (Surah At-Tawbah, 9:119)

During each year's admissions process, we encounter instances where the accuracy of the home address provided on an application is called into question. Regrettably, a number of school place offers are withdrawn following address-related concerns or a failure to provide satisfactory supporting evidence.

I want to be clear that providing a false or misleading home address to secure a school place is unacceptable. It undermines the fairness of our admissions process and, importantly, may deny another child a place to which they would otherwise have been entitled. Such actions are also wholly inconsistent with the Islamic values that our school seeks to uphold.

Our published admissions policy requires applicants to provide accurate information about their child's home address. The address declared must genuinely reflect where the child ordinarily lives, in accordance with the applicable admissions arrangements. Families must not use an address that misrepresents their circumstances in order to gain an unfair advantage.

The Governing Board takes this responsibility seriously. We will continue to work closely with the Local Authority to scrutinise applications, verify home addresses where concerns arise and take appropriate action where misleading information is identified. Where a place has been obtained through deliberately false or misleading information, an offer may be withdrawn in accordance with the relevant admissions rules.

We fully recognise that families may move home for genuine reasons, and these circumstances will always be considered fairly. Our concern is specifically with deliberate attempts to circumvent the admissions arrangements.

As parents, educators and governors, we share a responsibility to lead by example. We cannot expect our children to embrace honesty and fairness if these principles are not reflected in the choices we make ourselves. Protecting the integrity of our admissions process is therefore not simply an administrative responsibility, but a reflection of our shared Islamic ethos.

I would like to thank all parents once again for their honesty, cooperation and continued support. By upholding these principles together, we help ensure that Al-Noor remains a school community built on trust, fairness and strong Islamic values.

May Allah (SWT) guide us all to act with sincerity, honesty and justice.

Wassalamu Alaikum wa Rahmatullahi wa Barakatuh
